

EXPERIENCE
the
RED CENTRE
in AUTUMN

Have you actually visited Central Australia, Uluru (Ayres Rock) or Kata Tjuta (The Olgas)? Many plan to, but relatively few take the opportunity when holidays are due.

Uluru is Australia's greatest tourist destination and attracts hundreds of thousands of overseas visitors each year, but relatively few Australian have made the journey.

Uluru is ever changing. Thousands of tourists flock to the sand dune affectionately known as Sunset Strip each evening to enjoy champagne and the changing red hues of the Rock as the sun sets in the west.

The world's greatest monolith should be a Mecca for every Australian. To come, see and conquer (either the climb to the top or a walk around the base) should be the goal of every Australian.

We respect the wishes of the local elders not to climb Uluru, however, for some the climb to the top is a challenge. It will take many hours and is best embarked upon during the early morning cool of the day. The view and the absolute exhilaration of being at the top, challenges thousands of tourists each month. You will pass literally hundreds of fellow travellers and exchange greetings or a good Australian "Good'ay" along the way.

The summit is a cosmopolitan meeting place with tourists from Japan and Asia, Germany, Ireland, Sweden, the U.K. and other places afar. You'll be amazed at the cross section of the world represented on any day.

The visit to Uluru will be the experience that you'll remember for the rest of your life.
